Camera focus brackets, and a bolt. Adopted 3 September 2026.

The mark

The brackets are the kiosk looking at an item. The bolt is how fast it's over. It was chosen over barns, baskets and cash registers because those say ordinary retail, and the thing that makes this product worth talking about is that you hold something up and it just knows.

Two inks, four strokes, one solid

Deep green brackets carry the structure; the gold bolt is the only filled shape and the only place the eye lands. Because it is two flat colours with no gradient, no shadow and no fine detail, it survives being stamped on a receipt, embroidered on an apron, or rendered at 16 pixels in a browser tab.

Approved variants

Use full colour wherever the background allows it. Reversed is for the app sidebar and any dark ground. The one-colour versions exist for stamps, embroidery, faxed paperwork and single-ink printing — never recreate them by recolouring the full-colour file by hand.

Full colour

Primary. On cream or white.

Reversed

On deep green or photography.

One colour, black

Stamps, faxes, single-ink print.

On gold

Bolt switches to green to stay visible.

Lockups

Horizontal — the default. Website header, invoices, email signature. Gap between mark and word equals half the mark's height.

Farmgirl Finance

Stacked — for narrow or square spaces: the kiosk splash screen, a tote, a sticker.

Mark alone — app icon, favicon, social avatar. Only where the name is already obvious from context.

Size and clear space

Keep clear space around the mark equal to the height of the bolt — roughly a quarter of the mark's height. Nothing else sits inside that margin. Minimum size is 16 px on screen and 6 mm in print; below that the bracket gaps start to close up and it reads as a blob.

96 px — marketing

48 px — app header

32 px — nav

16 px — minimum

Colour

Hex is authoritative — it is what the running product uses. CMYK values are conversions for coated stock and should be proofed before any large print run rather than trusted blind.

Typography

Farmgirl Finance

Fredoka · 500–700 · headings, wordmark, big numbers. Its rounded terminals are what keep the brand warm next to a fairly technical mark.

Hold it up. It knows what it is.

Inter · 400–700 · body, labels, tables. Set figures in tabular numerals anywhere money is in a column.

Rules

Do keep the bolt gold

It is the only warm element and the only filled shape. It carries the whole mark.

Don't recolour to taste

No red bolt, no gradient, no two-tone brackets. Use an approved variant or leave it alone.

Do let it breathe

Clear space of one bolt-height on every side, minimum.

Don't rotate, skew or stretch

Scale proportionally. The brackets read as a camera frame only while they stay square.

Do use reversed on dark

Cream brackets, gold bolt. Never full-colour green on deep green.

Don't add effects

No drop shadow, bevel, glow or outline. It has to stamp and embroider cleanly.

In the React app the mark is a component, src/components/Logo.jsx, which takes its colours from currentColor and --logo-accent — so it inherits the surface it sits on and no second artwork is needed for the dark sidebar.
